Officially launching today, 27th August 2013, ExpatriateBriefing.com is the start of an online revolution for expatriate information and interaction. Highly user-orientated with content provided by an experienced editorial team and contributions from expatriates around the world, it is the go-to-point for any expatriate, providing useful information for the fully-fledged and potential emigrant.

ExpatriateBriefing.com provides the user with authoritative, relevant and up-to-date information covering a wide range of topics, from moving, to international lifestyles, to repatriation - and everything in between (<http://www.expatriatebriefing.com/expatriate-information/>), in addition to reliable tax and investment guides (<http://www.expatriatebriefing.com/investment/>).

Among a growing library of tools, ExpatriateBriefing.com offers search tools to find utilities companies, hospitals, schools, real estate and jobs (<http://www.expatriatebriefing.com/expatriate-tools/>) across the world.

With an emphasis on social interaction and online community, forums and user contributions, both knowledge and new friendships can be found. ExpatriateBriefing.com understands the social difficulties that the inexperienced expatriate can face when moving to a new country and provides information on expat social events in each area. The forum offers a chance for on-the-ground experiences to be shared between expatriates, from reviews of the best places to eat down to local exercise classes (<http://www.expatriatebriefing.com/expatriate-forum/>).

Information is delivered in a concise and clear manner with no jargon and in a user friendly environment. ExpatriateBriefing.com is truly an innovation in expatriate knowledge.
